

Cottonwood Heights

Weekly Update for Oct. 22-28, 2017

City Manager

Public Relations

1. Sent final edited proofs to the publisher for the November newsletter. Should be in homes by Oct. 31. Already compiling content for the Dec. newsletter.
2. Working on website updates, particularly the arts pages. Held a meeting with Kim to go over some of the requests from the arts council meeting last month. Schedules another meeting with Kim and Janalee Hunsaker to go over a few variations in mind.
3. Working on various video projects, most notably one for the "Light the Night" event on Nov. 27.
4. Creating new social media posts to market and promote the Monster Mash event on Fri. Oct. 27.

Administrative Services

1. The Monster Mash at the Cottonwood Heights Rec. Center was a smashing success for young and old.

Police

This experience was shared by Shelly Hanson who was working at the front desk on or about Oct. 24th. "A gentleman; who didn't leave his name, just came in to give "a compliment". He said, "The other day I was pulled over by a tall skinny cop by Target for not wearing my seat belt. I was pretty annoyed but put it on. A day or so ago I was pulled over again for no seat belt so I put it on AGAIN. Moments later I was in an accident that totaled my car... I would have been dead if I hadn't been stopped by that cop. Tell Robby Thank you." Then he smiled and walked away."

Community Development

2. The planning commission held a public hearing for a text amendment to the Planned Development District ordinance, and forwarded recommendations to the City Council for a rezone and a change to the sign ordinance.
3. The Salt Lake County Planning Department hosted an open house at city hall for its Wasatch Canyons General Plan Update.
4. If any department would like to join us in the parking lot on Oct. 31 for our Trunk or Treat, you are more than welcome! 3-5 p.m.
5. Ellen and Jana visited Whitmore library this week to get public comments for the Open Space Master Plan (see picture below).

6. Salt Lake County hosted another open house for their dog park implementation plan on Tuesday, Oct. 24. Staff representatives, city council members, and planning commissioners all participated in the open house.
